Not illustrated. 1881 Excerpt: .in with Peter and John through the beautiful gate of the temple; we see the man lame from his birth healed--see him rise, stand, walk, leap, and hear him praise God; and we witness the glorious work that follows it in the temple. We stand with Peter at the bedside of Eneas, and hear the word of the apostle, and see the helpless paralytic rise perfectly well. We stand with the apostles in the temple, and see the multitudes flock in from the whole region round about, bringing the disabled, and see all comers healed. We walk through the streets of Jerusalem with them, and see them lined with helpless ones laid down, that even the shadow of Peter might pass over them; and we see that their faith is not disappointed. And who is it that is the Lord s own hand in leading us through all these scenes with an interest so deep and a pen so graphic? Who but Luke, the beloved physician? Therefore we see that, however highly he esteemed the healing art with its natural remedies for those for whom it is the best they are prepared to accept, he esteemed the healing which is above the skill of man, and above the power of natural remedies, as incomparably more glorifying to God, and blessed for all who can accept it by faith. Should these all, or either of them, lead us to doubt the privilege of healing by the power...
